

USC students need a clearer way to know when each dining hall section opens and closes, not just the building itself. Many students arrive expecting certain food stations to be open, only to find them closed early. Providing accurate section-specific hours would make dining more convenient and reduce confusion.